

Let me share an interesting story with you.

Back in the 1800's, in the middle of the gold rush, a man named R.U. Darby traveled west with his uncle to dig and grow wealthy.

They stopped in Colorado, and Darby's uncle staked a mining claim. Both men worked tirelessly - from sun up until sun down - using nothing but picks and shovels.

The work was back-breaking, however both were driven by a burning desire to strike it rich!

Finally after much toil and struggle, Darby and his uncle discovered what they had risked everything and traveled thousands of miles for...

G O L D !

Needing heavier machinery to bring the shiny ore to the surface, they quietly covered up their find and went back home to Maryland to tell their family and a few friends what happened.

As you can imagine, everyone was thrilled to hear the news!

They all pitched in to buy the necessary equipment and had it shipped back to Colorado.

As a result, the work went alot faster, and their first load of ore was mined and sent to the smelter -- a factory where the metal was melted.

The money made from this confirmed they had stumbled upon one of the richest gold mines in the state.

Darby and his uncle were overjoyed! Just a couple more loads like this and they'd be completely out of debt scooping up nothing but pure profit.

Then something horrible happened. The gold just vanished.

Nowhere to be found!

Both men frantically continued drilling, trying to re-discover the vein that had supplied them with so much elation and hope.

However, this time their work didn't pay off. The vein had simply dried up. (or so they thought)

Discouraged and disappointed, they decided to give up and quit.

Before catching the train back home his uncle sold all the expensive mining equipment to a "junk man" for only a couple hundred dollars.

This junk man was smart. He quickly hired an expert, a mining engineer, to find out for sure if the vein had dried up.

After some inspection and further calculations, the engineer said the project had failed because the two men weren't familiar with the mine's fault lines.

He predicted the vein of gold would be found three feet from where R.U. Darby and his uncle stopped drilling!

And sure enough, that's exactly where it was discovered again.

ARE YOU JUST THREE FEET AWAY?

Anyone (and I mean anyone) who sets out achieve anything worthwhile in life will be temporarily defeated and experience failure at some point or another.

Unaware of how close they are to success most will abandon all hope and quit -- right before making it big.

After all, this is the easy way out. (Which is exactly why so many people go this route)

Who knows, maybe you're at this point right now.

Maybe it seems like this dream of firing your boss, working from home (or anywhere else you want), and calling your own shots is something that only works for other people -- not you.

Maybe you're suffering from a severe case of "information overload" (or worse "paralysis by analysis") and can't seem to understand this internet marketing stuff no matter how hard you try.

Maybe you just spent the past six months and a couple thousand dollars developing a website that hasn't produced a single lead or sale for your home-based business.

Whatever the case, I want you to remember this.

500 of the wealthiest people in America told Napoleon Hill (author of "Think and Grow Rich") their BIGGEST successes and achievements in life came AFTER they were overwhelmed by complete failure!

Thomas Edison failed 10,000 times (can you imagine that?) before finally inventing a fireless lamp.

Walt Disney went bankrupt and was fired by a newspaper editor for "lacking imagination and good ideas" before he built Disneyland.

Michael Jordan was cut by his high-school basketball coach before leading his college and professional teams to 7 championships.

Ludwig Van Beethoven was born deaf yet he wrote 9 symphonies and remains one of the most influential composers of our time.

So anytime I experience what appears to be a major setback, or my goals start to seem out of reach, I always come back to Napoleon's book and remind myself of this fact.

"FAILURES" AND "SETBACKS" ARE NOT ACTUALLY FAILURES!

They're simply a necessary step in the process of figuring out what works and what doesn't.

I hope these stories have inspired you (like they have me) to never lose sight of your dreams and to keep going no matter what.

May God bless you, your family and your business.

To Your Success,

Ann

P.S. The "junk man" in the story made millions of dollars not because he kept digging aimlessly like the Darby's.

But because he stopped and got a different perspective on the situation by seeking the advice of an outside expert.

Are you digging aimlessly in your business?

If you are, I want to remind you that Renegade Professional (our "click-by-click" training program) reopens tomorrow.

This basically means you have three options.

1) You can continue to waste countless hours of your life stressing out about talking to uninterested prospects (one-on-one) about your products and opportunity.

During this process, close friendships will be tested (if not ruined altogether) and you'll always have to "get pumped up" before approaching the next person on your names list.

2) You can learn how to generate leads, make sales, and grow a moneymaking business on the internet -- all by yourself.

This will require more time and effort on your part and you'll go through LOTS of trial and error. Nevertheless it is doable.

3) You can have someone who's been there before hold your hand and carefully walk you through every step -- which will shave months (even years) off your learning curve!

This way, you can finally begin building the business of your dreams starting NOW and get results trickling in as soon as tomorrow!

Anyways, this letter wasn't meant to be a blatant sales pitch for Renegade Professional or anything like that so I'll stop rambling about it now.

(Sorry, I have a tendency to "go off" like that sometimes, just ask my husband Brian. ☺)

Whatever path you choose, I want you to know I wholeheartedly respect your decision and wish you only the best.
